#130

This Race Never Truly Ends..

Most people spend their lives chasing what they don't have…
But they fail to value what they already possess.

A man with a bicycle thinks,
"I wish I had a bike…"
The one with a bike wishes for a car…
And the one with a car dreams of a private jet.

This race never truly ends.

True happiness is not found in "having more"…
True happiness is found in appreciating what you already have.

Because the person who learns to find joy in small things, eventually receives bigger blessings from life.

Even God gives more to those who are grateful for the blessings they already have.

Take a moment today…
And think about how many things you already have that millions of people in the world still pray for.

You can breathe… you have family… food… opportunities to learn…
These too are blessings.

Always remember:

“If you stay happy with what you have,

life will give you even more to be grateful for.” □